As Corporate Vice President and General Manager, I lead AMD's Semi-Custom Group with an engineering and entrepreneurial mindset and drove it with new transformational design wins to a multi-billion dollar business for AMD. In this role, I run all aspects of the semi-custom business across strategy, product development & architecture, operations, business development & sales, and silicon SoC design & platform engineering. In addition to Semi-Custom, I also lead our Cloud Gaming and Virtualized Desktop Infrastructure datacenter GPU businesses.

Engage with market makers to identify optimal technology and define innovative product architectures.

Develop strategic and deep engagements with partners' business & technical executive team to design highly advanced SOCs.

Lead fellow level architects for complex silicon designs into successful products. Engaging in early business development, engineering contracts through silicon and product architecture and development.

Lead SOC design team - oversee all silicon design effort (RTL, synthesis and physical design, design verification & DFT) for SOC development.

Lead business/competitive strategy and contract negotiation.

Lead AMD's overall Microsoft engagement of the entire AMD product portfolio, including game consoles (Xbox), graphics, client (Surface), and server (xCloud) solutions.

Corporate Vice President, Mobility Solutions, Client Business Unit

Mar 2013 - Mar 2014 · 1 yr 1 mo

Corporate Vice President & General Manager of AMD's Mobility Business Group.

Led end to end business execution of AMD's mobility products, including strategy, product definition & roadmap, pricing strategy, business development, product management, product marketing, and business plans to ensure AMD delivers world class differentiated solutions to its customers.

Led the ODM development and ecosystem team in Taiwan.
